It was simply a case of impositionthat is all. I have known you for many years, and if you should introduce a party to me and say you wanted his acknowledgment taken to a deed, I would not hesitate for a moment to certify it. This was the case in point. The introduction was from parties whom I knew through respectable channels. Bissell is a son-in-law of Mr. W. R. A new depot will shortly be built at Pilot Kuob, and all mail trains will stop there, as they now do at fronton. The site for the new depot is just beyond where the wagon-road crosses the track this side of the little creek which runs between the company's ground and and the town of Pilot Knob. Where the depot now stands the grade is very heavy, and all trains not positively required to stop there, go by with as much momentum as possible to assist them in making the still heavier grade beyond. A short time ago, Mr. Walsh came down to the Knob to see about some matters connected with the company's interests. After having attended to them, he hied himself to the depot at the appointed time for the coming of No. 2. Important business called him that day to the city,-but he didn't go; for No. 2 went by the depot without calling a halt, and Mr. Walsh was left benind to cogitate upon the conveniences and uses of a de pot where trains sometimes do, and sometimes don't, stop to take on human freight. We don't know that he swore, but are informed that he did declare he would see the evil amended. The preparations for the building of the new depot seem to assure us that he kept his word. Mr. Crain received orders last Friday to "level off" the site for the building, and ere many weeks Pilot Knob will have a depot on easy grade, when the engineers may "pull up" for passengers without being compelied to check the wheels of the rear coach to keep the train from backing into the Ironton
